PANAMA LIBEL CASE.

DECISION OF UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT SUSTAINS NEW YORK WORLD.

Court Unanimous in Holding That There Is No Federal Libel Law—Would Be Impossible to Sustain the Roosevelt Contention Without Overturning State Law—Decision Read by Chief Justice White—Text as Reported by Stenographer.

The Supreme Court of the United States Wednesday of this week delivered a unanimous decision in the case of Theodore Roosevelt against the New York World. The judgment of the lower court was affirmed and the newspaper wins the case.

Chief Justice White read the decision. A stenographer for the World was present, and the following, taken from the World, is assumed to be a full and correct report of the Chief Justice's reading:

HISTORY OF THE CASE.

Mr. Chief Justice White in handing down the decision of the court said: "I have the opinion of the court in the case of the United States vs. the Press Publishing Co.

"On the 4th of March, 1909, the Grand Jury of the Southern District of New York presented an indictment against the Press Publishing Co. charging, in fourteen counts, a crime of publishing a criminal libel on a military reservation. Seven of the counts related to the publication of this libel on the military reservation at West Point, New York, and the other seven of the counts related to the publication of the libel at the city Post-Office in the city of New York by delivering there to the Post-Office inspector the six issues of the New York World newspaper, which contained the matter charged as libelous. The persons libeled in the newspaper were the then President of the United States, the Secretary of War and other persons not officials. The case went to trial on a plea of not guilty. After the impaneling of the jury the Government conceded that the newspaper containing the libelous matter, the New York World newspaper, was published by the Press Publishing Co. in the city of New York, was circulated by that company extensively throughout the State of New York and throughout the entire United States, and printed in the defendant's printing establishment in the city of New York and circulated therefrom, and the defendant conceded the circulation of copies of the newspaper on the military reservation at West Point and the delivery of copies, as charged, in the Post-Office building in the city of New York.

"Thereupon the defendant moved to quash upon the following grounds:

"First—The court has no jurisdiction in this case. There is no statute of the United States authorizing this prosecution.

"Second—The act of 1898 does not apply to the case, as disclosed by the evidence.

"Third—If the act of 1898 is so construed as to cover the acts shown by the evidence it is unconstitutional.

"Fourth—The offense, if any, was committed wholly within the jurisdiction of the State of New York and was punishable there.

"Fifth—The defendant being a corporation is incapable of committing the offense charged in the indictment.

"The motion was heard, and the court delivered an opinion saying that it had concluded that the statute did not authorize the prosecution, and the indictment therefore was quashed.

"Before a formal judgment to that effect was entered, in order to prevent the question of double jeopardy, a juror was withdrawn and the court announced its opinion, quashing the indictment on the ground that it was not authorized by the second section of the act of 1898, upon which the indictment was based, and the Government is here, under the act of 1896, claiming that that was an erroneous construction of the statute."

THE OPINION OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Mr. Chief Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court, which was to the following effect: "The indictment was based on the act of July 7, 1898 (30 Stat. 717, Sec. 2). The effect of the act as pointed out in Franklin vs. United States 210, U. S. 559, 568-9, was to incorporate the criminal laws of the several States, in force on July 1, 1898, into the

HOLD MID-WINTER CONVENTION IN LOUISVILLE AND DISCUSS LIVE QUESTIONS.

Meet Together with Delegates to "Good Roads" Convention—President Miller Too Ill to Attend—Major Stahlman, of Nashville, Delivers Opening Speech—List of Speakers and of Members Who Registered.

The annual mid-winter meeting of the Kentucky Press Association was held in Louisville last week on Dec. 28 and 29. The sessions were held in the Hotel Seelbach. The entertainment of the visitors was in charge of the Louisville Convention and Publicity League, headed by R. W. Brown, managing editor of the Louisville Times and chairman of the programme committee. The attendance of State editors was the largest in the history of the organization.

President A. D. Miller of the association telegraphed from Richmond, Ky., that illness prevented his attendance. In his absence Colonel W. B. Haldeman, editor of the Louisville Times, called the convention to order and presided. Later the association sent a telegram of "sympathy and good cheer" to President Miller.

At the opening session the delegates of the Good Roads convention were present with the editors.

Major E. B. Stahlman, owner and editor of the Nashville (Tenn.) Banner, was the first speaker. He came to Louisville with Marmaduke B. Morton, the managing editor of the Banner, to meet the Kentucky newspaper men. Mr. Morton followed his chief with an address.

Other speakers were:

Mrs. Ella Hutchison Ellwanger, of Frankfort, "Your Home Paper."

Dr. Walter B. Gossett, member of the executive committee of Kentucky Commercial Clubs, "Co-operation and Federation."

At the second day's sessions E. D. Shinnock, chairman of the executive committee, occupied the chair. The chief address was made by A. Y. Ford, treasurer of the Columbia Trust Co., on "Tax Revision." Other speakers were: Samuel Judson Roberts, Lexington Leader, "A New Form of Cash Book."

WIDE AWAKE GAS CO.

Cleveland Corporation Uses the Daily Newspapers of the City to Present Its Side of the Case in a Controversy Over the Price of Gas.

Employment of the advertising columns of the daily newspaper by an important public utility corporation to sustain the contention that it was forced into the abandonment of its franchises and a discontinuance of its business by municipal legislation, is a rarity in the history of advertising.

The East Ohio Gas Co. of Cleveland has served formal notice on the City Council that on January 17, 1911, it will cease the manufacture of gas because the rate fixed by ordinance—75c. per 1,000—will not return a profit on the investment.

In a city of the size and importance of Cleveland this action is of more than ordinary importance. It is claimed that the company demonstrated beyond reasonable doubt that it could not manufacture and sell artificial gas at the rate fixed by the city, because it supplied natural gas also, and, in a sense, was its own competitor. It was deemed wise, therefore, that a full and frank presentation of the situation should be made and the conditions set forth so clearly that if the company was forced into the position of closing down its works the blame could not attach to it.

With that purpose in view, Vincent S. Cooke, of Blanchard & Cooke, Fifth Avenue Building, New York, went to Cleveland in the latter part of September and conducted a six weeks' campaign, setting forth facts taken from the official records which consisted of valuations by competent experts proving that the manufacture of the illuminating and heating agent could not be continued at the rate set by the City Council.

Mr. Cooke presented arguments every day in the advertising columns of newspapers. These advertisements were continued consecutively for 34 days and the declaration was made early that it was the purpose of the company to publish information from day to day, but not to engage in controversy.

It was asserted that the gas company should charge and receive fair rates for the service rendered—rates that would meet necessary operating expenses; provide adequate reserves for replacing worn out or obsolete plant and give a return on the money actually invested in the business so that there should be a reasonable and sufficient inducement to invite the investment of new capital as it was required for expansion.

It was argued that the increase of rate was justified by the increase in the cost of labor, real estate, raw and manufactured commodities.

The announcements attracted very general attention among all classes of people. A canvass was made of the leading business houses and it was found that between 95 per cent. and 98 per cent. of merchants had read the gas company's ads; that 80 per cent. approved of the company's method in setting forth its claims by paying for space and not seeking to gain editorial approbation. At the end of the sixth week the daily announcements were a matter of general comment in the business community, because of the logical manner in which the company presented its arguments.

Mr. Cooke states that there was no attempt made to play to the gallery or to influence public sentiment, except by cold facts and figures showing that the company had exhausted every means within its power to demonstrate its inability to supply artificial gas at 75c. and had shown it was unwilling to inconvenience any consumer, then it was in the position to let the public determine where the blame for its action should rest.

Mr. Cooke received many congratulations when his engagement came to an end, and the company expressed its very full and complete satisfaction.

STATE ADVERTISING.

New York Official Criticizes Methods of Giving It to Newspapers.

During the past fiscal year the State of New York spent $784,057.66 for State printing. Of this amount $582,884.19 was for legislative printing, and $201,173.47 for departmental requirements.

Controller Williams calls attention to the increasing outlay by the State for the publication of general laws and concurrent resolutions in various newspapers other than the official State paper. During the past fiscal year $234,717.99 was spent in this manner.

Concerning this Controller Williams says: It is said that some of the newspapers are dependent upon this State patronage for their existence. If this be so it should be clearly understood that a vast amount of the public moneys has been for years, and is now, devoted indirectly to the subsidizing of the press.

ALBANY ARGUS REDUCES PRICE.

Old New York Daily Now Sells for One Cent a Copy.

The Albany (N. Y.) Argus, which is one of the oldest papers in the country, reduced its price to one cent beginning Jan. 2.

The Argus is the last of the Albany newspapers to reduce the price to one cent a copy for the weekday editions.

Brandenburg in Tombs.

Broughton Brandenburg, the magazine writer, who is under indictment for forgery, was committed to the Tombs Tuesday in default of $2,000 bail. He was arrested in Hoboken, N. J., last Saturday as a fugitive from justice. Brandenburg was arrested last October for passing a worthless check on a publishing firm, and was later released on $750 bail. When his case was called he failed to appear.

The Baltimore News expects to be completely established in its new home by March 1. The editorial and composing rooms as well as the presses have already been moved into the structure, which is now rapidly nearing completion.

The business and advertising offices will ultimately occupy the entire ground floor. The second floor is occupied by the editorial rooms, and the third floor is turned over to the compositors. The presses are located in the basement.

The Munsey Building when completed will be eighteen stories in height and have a large floor area. Above the third floor the building will be given over to offices. It is considered a notable addition to the business structures of Baltimore.

FOUR LIBEL SUITS FILED.

Publisher and Advertising Company Defendants in $200,000 Action.

Olin M. Pague, publisher of the National Banker, and the R. F. Outcault Advertising Co., were last week made defendants in four suits for $50,000 each, filed in Chicago by Charles E. Zimmermann, secretary of the C. E. Zimmermann Advertising Agency.

The suits are based on alleged libelous articles in the paper controlled by Pague, and which the Outcault Co. is said to have helped circulate in their own interest. The articles are said to have contained statements that the Zimmermann Co. was copying the methods and style of the Outcault Co.

SPHINX CLUB DINNER.

Noted Speakers to Discuss Honesty in Advertising at January Affair.

"Honesty in Advertising" will be the topic for discussion at the January dinner of the Sphinx Club of New York which will be held next Tuesday. The speakers will include representatives of the State, city, press, pulpit and stage.

A discussion is planned at the close of the formal remarks in which representatives of advertising in various lines are expected to reply to or add to the remarks of the scheduled speakers. It should prove to be one of the most interesting meetings of the club.

Wisconsin to Advertise.

The Wisconsin Advancement Association will ask the Wisconsin legislature to appropriate $40,000 for the purpose of advertising the State. The members of the Association will raise an equal amount among themselves, and the entire amount will be used to exploit the advantages of Wisconsin to prospective settlers. The money raised by private subscription will be spent in the newspapers.

Advocates State Printing Office.

In his report to the Governor of Colorado, Secretary of State James B. Pearce recommends the establishment of a State printing office, which, he says, would cost $50,000 for preliminary equipment, but which would pay for itself in a biennial period. In support of his claim he declares that a great deal more matter is printed than is ever issued through authorized channels.

James A. Schilling has purchased the Sylvan Grove (Kan.) News.

JOHN N. HARMAN.

Recently Made City Editor of Brooklyn Times Following Reorganization.

John N. Harman, who has been made city editor of the Brooklyn Times, following the recent change in ownership and reorganization, is one of the best known newspaper men in Greater New York.

Mr. Harman goes to the Times from the Brooklyn Citizen, with which he has been identified for the past ten years, the greater part of the time as city editor.

He has also been prominently connected with other Brooklyn newspapers. He is considered an all around newspaper man of pronounced executive ability, and enjoys great personal popularity. During the last election he ran for Senator in the Sixth Senatorial District, and in a strong Republican foothold was defeated by Senator Eugene M. Travis by the close margin of 167 votes in a total of 29,000. Mr. Harman is one of the trustees of the New York Press Club, and was also recently made president of the Anvil Chorus.

Trusteeship for Springfield News.

The will of the late Charles J. Bellamy, editor and proprietor of the Springfield (Mass.) Daily News, provides for a trusteeship for the paper, and the Roll Stationery Co. comprising the job print, and ultimately for the succession of his son, Charles J. Bellamy, Jr., when the latter shall become twenty-four years old. Mrs. Imogen C. Bellamy, wife of the testator, is named as executrix, and also appointed one of the trustees. She, together with the son, is to name the other two.

After Lower Rate on Newsprint.

An effort is being made to secure a lower rate on newsprint for Des Moines publishers by Freight Commissioner E. G. Wylie of the Greater Des Moines Committee. A petition which will be presented before the Interstate Commerce Commission will show that the rate on newsprint from Wisconsin producing to Des Moines is 18 cents per hundred pounds, and that other cities of the land enjoy rates which are proportionately much lower.

PROPOSED NEW HOME OF CLEVELAND LEADER.

CLEVELAND LEADER HOME.

Work on New Fourteen-Story Structure Will Begin This Spring.

There is printed on this page a picture of the proposed new home of the Cleveland (O.) Leader, on which work will be begun in the early spring. The structure, which will stand at the corner of Superior avenue and East Sixth street, has a north frontage of 149 feet, and 214 feet on Sixth street. It will be fourteen stories in height. The company plans for the new home an equipment in the mechanical and other departments unsurpassed, it is said, by any other paper in the country.

Following the recent change in the ownership of the Leader, a full account of which was published in THE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER, there has been a complete reorganization of its newsgathering methods and departments tending greatly to increase its efficiency as a newspaper. Aside from the full Associated Press report the Leader has added the complete news service of the New York Times and Chicago Tribune and the foreign journals with which they exchange news.

SEDITION IN ENGLAND.

Distributor of an Anarchist Paper Arrested in London.

Edward H. James, nephew of the late Professor William James, of Harvard University, and editor of the Paris Liberator, an alleged anarchist monthly, will personally take charge of the defense of Edward F. Mylius, who was arrested in London last week "in camera" by the London police. The proceedings have been kept secret. Mylius was engaged in distributing the Liberator in London.

It is known that the London police have been on watch to arrest any who are responsible for the Liberator, because the paper has been publishing "scandalous and seditious" attacks upon the British royal family. In the November issue it revived an old story about King George, telling about his alleged marriage at Malta, in 1890, to the daughter of a British admiral. The authorities say the story was long ago disproved.

The reprinting of the story is ground for a criminal charge, in England, against the editors, publishers and distributors of the periodical.

statute and to make such criminal laws, to the extent of such incorporation, laws of the United States. The text of the second section of the act of 1898 is this:

"That when any offense is committed in any place, jurisdiction over which has been retained by the United States or ceded to it by a State, or which has been purchased with the consent of the State for the erection of a fort, magazine, arsenal, dockyard or other needful building or structure, the punishment for which offense is not provided for by any law of the United States, the person committing such offense shall, upon conviction in the circuit or district court of the United States for the district in which the offense was committed, be liable to and receive the same punishment as the laws of the State in which said place is situated now provide for the like offense when committed within the jurisdiction of such State, and the said courts are hereby vested with jurisdiction for such purposes; and no subsequent repeal of any such State law shall affect any such prosecution. (30 Stat., 717.)

NO FEDERAL STATUTE ON CRIMINAL LIBEL. "As it is conceded that there is no statute of the United States expressly defining and punishing the crime of criminal libel when committed on a United States reservation, &c., it follows that in order to determine the correctness of the ruling of the court below, the Supreme Court is called upon (A) to accurately fix the extent to which, by the effect of the act of 1898, the criminal laws of the States were incorporated therein so as to authorize the punishment of crimes defined by such laws as offenses against the United States, and (B) this being done to make an analysis of the criminal laws of the State of New York to ascertain whether the particular offenses here charged were made punishable by those laws, and if so, whether by virtue of the act of 1898 they constituted offenses against the United States punishable in the courts of the United States.

"It is certain on the face of the second quotation that it exclusively relates to offenses committed on United States reservations, &c., which are not provided for by any law of the United States, and that as to such offenses the State law, when they are by law defined and published, is adopted and made applicable. That is to say, while the state leaves no doubt where acts are done on reservations which are expressly prohibited and punished as crimes by a law of the United States that law is dominant and controlling, yet, on the other hand, where no law of the United States has expressly provided for the punishment of offenses committed on reservations, all acts done on such reservations which are made criminal by the laws of the several States are left to be punished under the applicable State statutes.

CONGRESS HAD CONSTITUTION IN MIND. "When these results of the statute are borne in mind it becomes manifest that Congress in adopting it sedulously considered the two-fold character of our constitutional government and had in view the enlightened purpose so far as the punishment of crime was concerned to interfere as little as might be with the authority of the States on that subject over all territory situated within their exterior boundaries, and which hence would be subject to exclusive State jurisdiction but for the existence of a United States reservation. In accomplishing these purposes it is apparent that the statute, instead of fixing by its own terms the punishment for crimes committed on such reservations which were not previously provided by a law of the United States, adopted and wrote in the State law, with the single difference that the offense, although punished as an offense against the United States, was to be nevertheless readily demonstrated even if to the extent it would have been punishable if the territory embraced by the reservation remained subject to the jurisdiction of the State.

"While this meaning, the court holds, stands out in bold relief from the text of the section, the correctness of such meaning will be nevertheless readily demonstrated even if for the sake of argument it is conceded that the text is ambiguous. The court so holds because a consideration of the genesis and development of the legislation which the act of 1898 embraces will leave no doubt that the construction given by the court to the act enforces the exclusive and only purpose intended to be accomplished by its adoption.

"Coming to consider the text of the statute relied on, the Supreme Court held that the lower court was right in holding that it was not applicable to the indictment. Looking at the text of that statute it becomes reasonably manifest that its purpose was to provide for the punishment of a crime committed on a reservation where, otherwise, the criminal would have gone unwhipped of justice because of the absence of United States legislation providing for the offense, and the statute, in making the State law applicable, made the State law applicable in its entirety, with all its provisions. That that was its meaning, if there be doubt in the text, is very plain when its history is considered.

WHY JUSTICE STORY DREW THE LAW. "Prior to 1825 an elaborate act was drawn by Mr. Justice Story of this court, contemplating the punishment of crimes committed on reservations where the United States had not legislated, and this section, except as to certain provisions as to the character of the reservation, to which it applied, is identical in language with the eleventh section of the act drawn by Mr. Justice Story. "In the life of Mr. Justice Story there is a statement of his on the subject of his purpose, which contemplates that he had in mind simply to provide for the punishment of crime on a reservation by the application of the State law, and by that law alone, because where Congress had not specially otherwise defined the criminal would go unpunished.

"In 1825 an act substantially like Mr. Justice Story's was drawn, and the eleventh section of his act became the third section of the act of 1825.

WEBSTER DECLARED NO CONFLICT CREATED. "Mr. Webster, who introduced that act, in his report upon it was careful to say that there would be no confusion and no trouble created by the act, for its simple purpose was to punish, by the State law, crimes committed on the reservation in the same manner and in the same way in which they would have been punished if the reservation was in the State.

"Having fixed the meaning of the act of 1898, and, as heretofore stated there being no law of the United States specifically punishing the offense of criminal libel when committed on a reservation of the United States, it remains only to determine whether applying the law of the State of New York in accordance with the act of 1898 there was power in the Grand Jury to present the indictment here under consideration or authority in the courts of the United States to entertain jurisdiction thereof as charging a substantive and distinct offense under the laws of the United States. That is to say, was the indictment found below consistent with the application of the State law in accordance with the provisions of the act of 1898?"

The opinion of the Court here rehearses at length the provisions of the New York State laws, quoting sections 243, 245, 249, 250 and 251 of the laws of New York and, and sections 138, 139 and 140 of the code of criminal procedure, laws of New York.

THE TWO ESSENTIAL PROPOSITIONS. "The Court further held," continued the Chief Justice, "that the unity between the act of composing and the primary publication of a newspaper containing a libelous article within the State of New York and of subsequent publications or repetitions thereof by the publishers of the newspapers are clearly the resultant of the laws of New York above quoted and referred to. Two propositions are the Court holds, clearly established:

"First, That adequate means were afforded for punishing the circulation of a libel on a United States reservation by the State law and in the State courts without the necessity of resorting to the courts of the United States for redress;

"Second, That resort could not be had to the courts of the United States to punish the act of publishing a newspaper libel by circulating a copy of the newspaper on the reservation upon the theory such publication was an independent offense, separate and distinct from the primary printing and publication of the libelous article within the State of New York, without disregarding the law of that State and frustrating the plain purpose of such law, which was that there should be but a single prosecution.

"These propositions being true, it follows in the light of the construction given to the act of 1898 that the lower court was right in quashing the indictment as not authorized by that act. No other conclusion was possible, the Supreme Court holds, as the court below could not have sustained the indictment without giving to the statute a meaning directly conflicting with the construction affixed to it by the Supreme Court. In other words, the Court could not have upheld the indictment without deciding that, because the statute provided that acts when committed on United States reservations, which were not expressly made criminal by law of the United States, might be prosecuted and punished in accordance with the State law, therefore, a prosecution was authorized which was inconsistent with that law and in disregard thereof.

STATE AND FEDERAL LAWS IN HARMONY. "And further, albeit that Congress, having regard for the autonomy of the States, had deemed it best not to treat reservations within States as foreign to the States for the purpose of punishing crime, unless expressly provided to the contrary, nevertheless, the legislation enacted by Congress for this purpose had destroyed the end contemplated, since that legislation when rightly construed, while applying the State legislation to crimes committed on a reservation as if the territory was foreign and not domestic, at the same time exacted that the State law when thus applied should be enforced as if the territory was to respect for the purpose domestic, but, on the contrary, was wholly foreign.

"The Court holds that the contradiction and confusion to which the contention thus reduces itself is too apparent to require anything but a few additional words, since the conception just pointed out lies at the basis of all the propositions so ably pressed at bar to secure a reversal, since they all depend upon a construction of the act of 1898, which the Court holds to be wrong. Great, therefore, as might otherwise be their potency with the foundation gone upon which they rest, all come to this, that the statute sanctions that which it by necessary implication prohibits, and, moreover, destroys the great public purpose which its adoption was intended to foster and protect.

"The Court specifically states that the present ruling would not necessarily be applicable in a case where an indictment was found in a court of the United States for a crime which was wholly committed on a reservation, disconnected with any crime committed within the jurisdiction of the State, and where the prosecution for such crime in the courts of the United States, instead of being in conflict with the applicable State law, was in all respects in harmony therewith."

IMPOSSIBLE WITHOUT OVERTHROWING STATE LAW. "As laid down the printed copy of the Chief Justice White said:

"It would be impossible to sustain this prosecution without overthrowing the very State law by the authority of which the prosecution can be alone maintained.

"It goes further than that, we think. It is manifest, when the text of the law is considered, and its historical evolution is borne in mind, that the impelling and motive power for its adoption was the sedulous purpose of Congress to respect the autonomy of the States and not cause every reservation situated in a State, if Congress had not legislated to the contrary, to become distinct and separate foci for all purposes of criminal legislation, conflicting with and perhaps antagonistic to the laws of the States, and therefore destructive in aspects of the very fundamental conceptions upon which our Government is founded.

"In other words, we think, when the statute is rightly construed that the case reduces itself to this: That the State law must be applied for the purpose of punishing the crime and in order to accomplish that purpose and make it effectual the State law must not be disregarded by which alone, the crime can be punished; that for the purpose of punishing the crime and applying the State law a reservation in the interior boundaries of the State is to be considered wholly foreign and yet for the purpose of executing the law the reservation is to be considered wholly foreign and the prosecution conducted as if it was totally beyond the confines of the State.

"For this reason, we think, the Court below was right and its judgment is affirmed."

Circus Heads Fight Bill Posters.

The Showmen's Association of America and the Associated Bill Posters of America met in Chicago last week to try and agree upon a schedule for posting bills. The bill posters recently raised the rates and the circus men objected so strongly that they organized to fight the matter. All the circus owners in the country were present at the conference, which lasted for ten hours without an agreement being reached. The meeting was adjourned until Jan. 23, when they will try it again.

The Only Way to Get Into the 60,000 German Homes of Philadelphia is through the Consolidated German Newspapers. This combination is almost a "trust" from the newspaper viewpoint. It is a helpful monopoly, however, as a low combination rate puts you in touch with a German population equal to that of Cincinnati. It is undoubtedly the best advertising buy in "The City of Homes."

The Consolidated German Newspapers usually rank second or third in the Philadelphia morning field in volume of advertising carried. This is an index that the local merchant thinks well of the high-class German element of Philadelphia.

The following table shows the volume of display advertising printed in each of the morning newspapers from November 1 to November 30, 1910:

LIQUORLESS PAPER.

All Forms of Liquor and Beer Advertisements Dropped by the Detroit Times—Estimated Loss from Beer Ads Placed at $5,000.

On January 1 the Detroit Times became a liquorless newspaper, all advertisements of that character will henceforth be refused admission to its columns. Certain forms of liquor advertising had already been dropped by the Times during the past year. In a signed editorial concerning the new policy of the Times, headed "May We Add a Mite to Mr. Carnegie's Ten Millions?" Publisher James Schermerhorn says in part:

There are two forms of public beneficence.

One is to give of your superabundance for the common good.

Another is to forego the accumulation of a superabundance by exercising a little more care and consistency in the way you get it.

The Times chips in an annual contribution of $5,000 for individual, industrial or domestic (what you will) health, happiness and tranquility, by foregoing after Jan. 1st, 1911, this amount of revenue from beer advertisements.

(All other forms of liquor advertising having been dropped The Times within the past year.)

This, then, is our Christmas offering to the homes and families that have treated The Times as a welcome guest for ten years.

We cannot say that it is a Christmas surprise, exactly, for some of the recipients have been "hinting and alluding at it" as just what they wanted.

Beats all how good people want you to persevere in grace once you take a stand for better things. And there's no evading their logic.

They make one think of the severe test imposed upon the certain rich young man as a condition of his salvation—"Sell all that thou hast and give to the poor."

Having seen how good it is to get a newspaper free from all other forms of offensive advertising, they just would not be happy until the alcoholic announcements were tabooed, too.

So we give the friends and supporters of clean journalism what they want and the credit for getting it, too.

This is a victory for enlightened public sentiment touching the responsibility of newspapers. Appropriating some share of the credit for inspiring this sentiment, we propose to be responsive to its every reasonable demand.

Morally, industrially, economically, the age is against the intemperance of which beer-drinking is often the first stage.

Many homes into which this paper goes alike as the chronicle of the day's history and the professed instrument of helpfulness, believe strongly that beer is inimical to the best interests of the family.

Many have voted to banish the sale of it from their communities.

The Times believes it has no moral right to antagonize the conscientious convictions of these homes and communities through what it prints in its advertising columns.

We do not care to be talking beer every day to people who do not want to drink it, and who do not want their children to be invited to drink it by their home paper; nor to those who ought not to drink it.

We realize it is not good form to tell what a Christmas present cost.

But we put in the price ($5,000) for the benefit of those amiable critics who, every time this paper, under a policy of progressive decency, has closed its columns to an objectionable group of advertisements, have gone up and down the town winking owlishly and chortling gleefully—

"Good reason—The Times can't get 'em, see!"

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 7, 1911

A PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATION THAT ADVERTISES.

In another column of this issue is printed an article detailing the method by which the East Ohio Gas Company of Cleveland set forth to the public of Cleveland its side of the controversy over the price of gas.

Cleveland is famously a progressive city, and so we are not astonished to find a "progressive" gas company in that city. It cannot be denied that the general public of this country puts the typical gas company in a class that is in purpose and practice opposed to what is commonly understood nowadays by "progressivism."

As the progressives themselves admit, "publicity," meaning openness and frankness in dealing with the public, is one of the fundamental principles of the new progressivism.

Now comes a gas company that frankly hires advertising space in the newspapers, and therein tells its story. The company knows it must be a good, readable story, well filled with matter that carries verisimilitude, for the story must rest entirely upon its own merit. That word "advertisement" brushes away all extra influences that go to help or hinder the truth of a newspaper statement. Yes, the gas company in Cleveland is one of the awakened ones.

The Cleveland public service corporation is among the first to realize that the old practice of cunning and slickness to sneak in a favorable "reading notice" is worn to death, and all the tricks in the bag of the bygone press agent are as cheap and useless as Punch and Judy illusions in a modern high school.

The public speaks and the wise understand. The public says to big corporations: "Come out and meet us fair and open. Come out and tell your story. Tell it yourself and don't hide behind any newspaper or any dummy you may put up. We shall take your story for what it is worth and we will credit you with courage and fairness when you openly hire advertising space to tell the story."

We have in mind that the advertising columns of the newspaper shall come into a new service. Once upon a time controversialists used to "hire a hall and thrash it out." Oratorical debating has nearly gone out, except in law courts; the newspaper has taken the place of the "hired hall," but the debaters have been mostly editors. A few men, like Thomas W. Lawson and C. W. Post, have hired the advertising columns and printed their stories, but it was left for the gas company in Cleveland to discover a new country.

THE PANAMA LIBEL CASE.

We urge publishers to read the full text of the Supreme Court decision in the Roosevelt-New York World libel case, which is printed in this issue. Fortunately for the nation, and particularly for the newspapers and their readers, the decisions and opinions delivered by the Supreme Court constitute a literature of very high class. The average citizen reads easily and with quick understanding an opinion by the Supreme Court, whereas it often requires the perception and habits of a Philadelphia lawyer to get at the meaning of opinions handed down by lower courts.

The average well informed citizen knows that this decision delivered by Chief Justice White, is of immense importance to all the people, and that it is likely to be placed in the list of great historic decisions. The average well informed citizen will know that the decision sets at rest for good and all the question whether the Federal Government has a libel law superior and supremely authoritative over State laws.

But the publisher should know more about this case than the average well informed citizen. The words of Chief Justice White should be read by every publisher, and we think the decision should be preserved in the library of every newspaper office.

LIQUOR ADVERTISEMENTS

In another column of this issue we print the announcement of the Detroit (Mich.) Times to the effect that in future all liquor advertisements will be rejected, notwithstanding the fact that by the rejection of liquor advertisements the receipts of the paper will be reduced fully $5,000 per annum.

We consider this a very important decision on the part of the management and are of the opinion that before the end of the present year the supposed loss will prove to be a gain in the shape of both increased circulation and advertising patronage. We believe that such action upon the part of publishers will not only have a wholesome effect upon the community in which the paper is published, but upon the paper itself.

Parents are not blind to the fact that their children of tender years are reading the newspapers and being influenced by them, and that it is of the greatest importance that the family paper should be clean.

NEW INTAGLIO PRESS.

Walter Scott & Company Now Installing Photogravure Rotary.

Walter Scott & Co., printing press manufacturers, of Plainfield, N. J., state that they are now installing in a New York plant one of their new Intaglio or Photogravure Rotary Presses. The press is constructed on principles entirely different from the previous machines, making the economical production of photogravure prints possible not only in monochrome, but also in colors. The "wiping" device on the press entirely overcomes the objections usually found in mechanisms of this type. The press was given a very thorough test in their works at Plainfield, where it fully met all expectations.

A number of experts in this class of printing inspected the press in Plainfield, and so enthusiastic were the visitors that a number of orders for similar machines have already been placed by prominent concerns. These machines are now under construction and will be delivered within a short time.

D. J. Scott stated that Walter Scott & Co. are in a position to accept additional orders for presses of this type.

BUSINESS OFFICE NOTES.

In a sworn statement the management of the Pensacola (Fla.) Journal states that the daily average circulation for the past three months ending Dec. 31 was 7,135 copies. The average circulation of the Weekly Journal was 2,640.

The Christian Science Monitor, of Boston, contained in its issue of Jan. 2 a complete index of all of 1910's important events as published in that paper.

M. F. Hanson, general manager of the Philadelphia Record, states that the average daily circulation of the Record for the nine months ending Sept. 30, 1910, was 173,933 copies.

According to an audit made by a public accountant the average daily circulation of the Kalamazoo (Mich.) Evening Press for the past year was 10,022 copies. The records in the Kalamazoo post office show, it is said, that the Press mailed a daily average of 4,500. The city distribution, including news-stands, street sales and express agents' bundles, a daily average of over 5,000 copies.

The Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin recently issued a special edition "dedicated to New Mauwaukkee at the end of the first decade of the twentieth century." Aside from the regular twelve-page news section there was a hand-somely printed twenty-page supplement devoted to the industrial and commercial progress of the city. The issue carried a heavy volume of advertising.

The Los Angeles Record, in a period dating from Oct. 1 to Dec. 16, closed 153 new advertising contracts with merchants and business houses of the city.

The Dayton (O.) News recently issued a special newsboys' edition, which was given them free of charge, the boys receiving all the money secured through the sale of the paper. This is an annual event with the Daily News and each year it nets the newsies a substantial bit of Christmas money. The first page, which was printed in color, was illustrated with a photograph of a newsboy taken from life. There was also an editorial on "The Newsboy." The issue contained thirty-four pages and carried a large amount of advertising.

A recent issue of the Bay City (Mich.) Tribune contained thirty-six pages and carried over 3,600 inches of display advertising. This was not a "Booster" edition, the business carried being purely regular. It is believed to be a remarkable showing for a city of 45,000.

The Orange (Tex.) Leader, which always issues a special holiday number of unusual excellence, surpassed even itself in the issue of Christmas just passed. The number contained twenty-four pages, exclusive of a handsome cover. It was printed on super-calendered paper, well illustrated, and reflects great credit upon the publishers.

Foresight vs. Hindsight.

When Mrs. Eddy died, did you have to scramble for illustrations? Our editors had merely to send to their morgues for our file pictures of Mrs. Eddy, her home, her grandsons; her lieutenants, Fry, Farlow, McLellan, Strickler, et al.; Mrs. Stetson and the New York church. We anticipated the Mexican Rebellion in the same way. It's comfortable to have someone think out the picture problem for you. Try it.
